Set in a haunted house, After Discipline veers between tragedy and comedy, following the psychoanalytic method. A family drama told by one person, the unnamed protagonist shares a longing to be known by telling a number of increasingly strange stories, both personal and second hand. Rather than a narrative arc, this film uses a collagistic editing technique to explore possibilities of what it is to be a self. After Discipline is a forty-five minute exploration of gender expression, the American justice system, consensual kink and narcissistic mothers.

This project began as a response to Discipline Masters, (1988) a four hour long confessional video made by artist Julia Scher, in which she tells stories from her childhood and her mother's influence on her sexuality, as well as the carceral-like atmosphere of her family home.
